

Enrique Robles, MD

PRIMARY CARE PHYSICIAN

My mother, a social worker, instilled in me to be of service to others. I strive to provide my senior patients the type of competent and caring experience that I want for her. As a child in Mexico, I would sneak into a public health clinic and marvel at how many people were being helped by the doctor. I knew very early that I wanted to be like him and help other people. In my free time, I enjoy traveling, cycling, working out, watching movies and meditation.

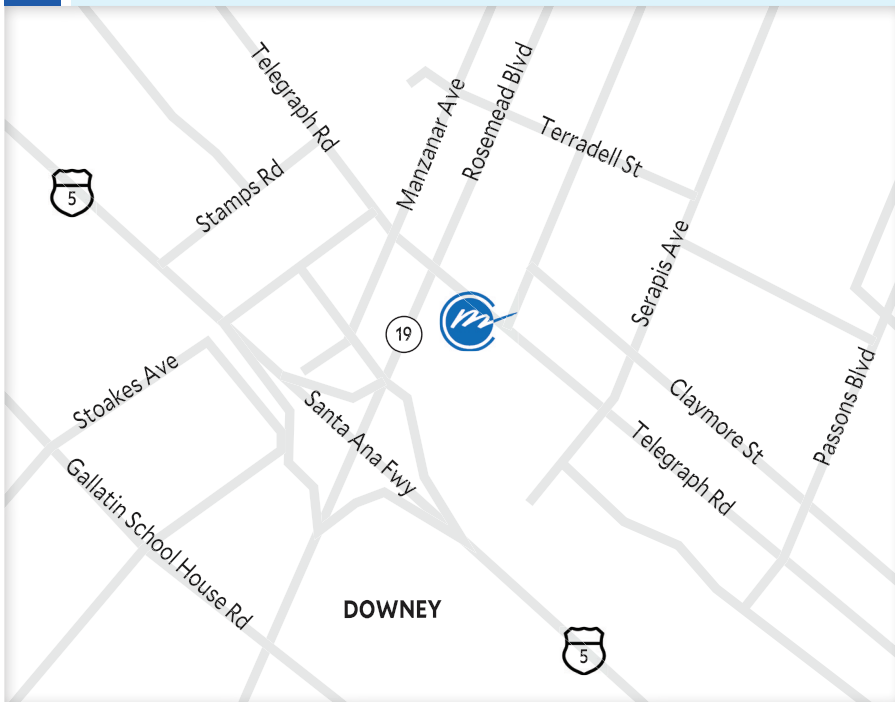

Education: Bachelor's degree from Lehigh University
Medical degree from Tulane University School of Medicine

Residency: University of New Mexico Hospital

Office Languages: English, Spanish

“ I believe that every person is an individual... each with their own priorities, circumstances and beliefs. I believe in a proactive, holistic approach to healthcare. ”
