

Richard McGuire, MD

INTERNAL MEDICINE, GASTROENTEROLOGY

I decided I wanted to work in healthcare back in high school while I cared for my grandmother who was dying of cancer. That's when I knew that I wanted a profession where I could make a difference in someone's life. I began working in healthcare in 1980, and I've been with CareMore since 1993. I like that CareMore has good overall support systems in place, especially for patients requiring extensive or specialized ongoing care. In my spare time, I enjoy running, snow skiing, traveling with family and spending time with my three wonderful grandchildren.

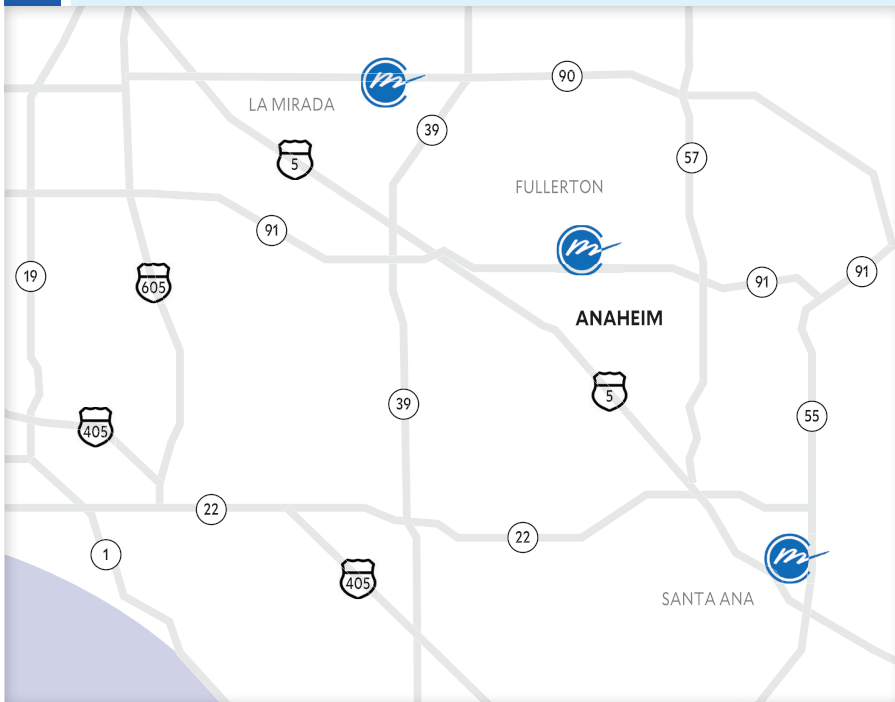

Education: Bachelor's degree from Yale University
Medical degree from New York University

Residency: Yale - New Haven Hospital (Internal Medicine)
University of California San Francisco (GI)

Office Languages: English, some Spanish

“ I believe that healthcare is a team endeavor with the doctor as coach and patient as the player. Together, they can improve the quality of health and quality of life for the individual. ”
